Work with Pivot Learning and UnboundEd to Re-envision Instruction Through Equitable Systems

As you prepare for back-to-school, Pivot Learning and UnboundEd can help you plan for the re-launch of instruction and for equitable interventions to help all students recover learning lost this spring. COVID-19 highlighted and deepened existing inequities in access to high-quality learning and instruction. In this moment, districts can not only respond to the needs resulting from disruptions last spring, but re-envision how their systems support educational equity. Working together, we can help you reverse longstanding gaps and create a new path forward.

Our free Equity Reset Toolkit provides the steps and resources to build a data-driven, equitable learning recovery plan that re-envisions what access to grade-level instruction looks like for every student. The toolkit will help you identify the district systems that support student growth and achievement in the fall as you reopen schools. As organizations that share your commitment to educational justice, Pivot Learning and UnboundEd can partner with your district to implement the actions outlined in the toolkit. This will enable you to establish new systems for equitable ELA and math instruction for in-person, remote, or blended learning.
